There is flexibility on items of clothing/headwear/jewellery as part of religious observance. Clothing and headwear, such as hijab for example, should be in school uniform colours (black, white or royal blue) where possible. Children are free to remove these items if they wish to.

We also recognise that some young people with SEND require flexibility in the uniform as a necessary reasonable adjustment to access the school environment. If there are justifiable reasons, such as these (or any others) why a parent/carer would wish their child to wear clothes that differ from the school uniform, the school will look sympathetically at such request.
